Golf at The National - Long Island Course

One game of golf.

Golf has been played at The National Golf Club Long Island course since 1983 when the British architect, Gordon Oliver designed nine holes around the property perimeter.

It is located on the southern edge of the Melbourne Sandbelt. The course was previously the Frankston Raceway and sits on undulating land and is known for its distinctive bunkering and tree-lined fairways. The course offers only three par threes, with a focus on the longer holes.
